

Statute Law Committee Copyright Policy

Whereas, the State of Washington claims copyright in portions of the Revised Code of Washington and portions of the Washington Administrative Code and in supplements to each thereof, and hence has included copyright notices in such works;

Whereas, the purpose of claiming copyright in such works is to prevent the product of the intellectual and professional work of the Statute Law Committee staff from being used for profit by publishers of legal materials; and

Whereas, there is no intent to interfere with the dissemination of information about the laws and regulations of the State of Washington through the news media, or with any research, educational or other use of such laws and regulations by law schools and other educational institutions, now, therefore,

The State of Washington hereby grants permission to any person or organization to use such works in their entirety, including the portions thereof in which copyright is claimed, for any noncommercial purpose. All other uses of such works must have the specific permission of the State of Washington. Permission may be conditioned on payment of compensation as determined from time to time by the Statute Law Committee. The permission granted herein does not include the right to permit others to use such works.
