INSTRUCTIONS ON STYLE
FOR THE WASHINGTON ADMINISTRATIVE CODE (WAC)
2017

(1) PUNCTUATION AND GRAMMAR

(a) Commas. "It is urged that the comma is the lowest and least significant of all punctuation marks . . . We must confess, however, to a very high regard for the lowly comma." Peters v. Watson Co., 40 Wn.2d 121 (1952). The comma is to be used only if required. The most important uses of the comma are described in the following:

(i) In a series of three or more words or phrases, a comma is used after each item except the last, as in "officers, deputies, and employees." This rule applies to both conjunctive, "and," and disjunctive, "or," series.

(ii) A nonrestrictive clause is set off by commas, but a restrictive clause, which is essential to the meaning of the word being modified, should not be set off by commas. Compare the following two sentences, which illustrate a restrictive clause and a nonrestrictive clause, respectively:
   Men who hate football should stay home.
   Men, who hate football, should stay home.

(iii) A comma is used to separate the independent clauses of a compound sentence, but it should not be used to separate the noun from the verb in a simple sentence. The following examples illustrate the proper use and omission of commas in a simple sentence and a compound sentence, respectively:
   The board may adopt rules to implement this chapter and shall report annually to the governor.
   The board may adopt rules to implement this chapter, and the board shall report annually to the governor.

(iv) Always place commas around the year when used in a date, thus: For the period from December 1, 2005, through December 1, 2007, the rate must . . .

(v) If a qualifying phrase applies to all antecedents instead of only to the immediately preceding one, separate the qualifying phrase from the antecedents with a comma. Judson v. Associated Meats and Seafoods, 32 Wn. App. 794, 801 (1982). See Part II (12)(v) of the Bill Drafting Guide about the last antecedent rule.

(b) Semicolons. A semicolon is not used where a comma will suffice, but is to be used to separate phrases already containing commas. A semicolon, not a period, is used following each item in a series listing that is introduced by a colon, thus:
   The board has the following powers and duties:
   (1) Inspection of all dental appliances for safety, durability, and ease of operation;
   (2) Licensing of all dental appliance manufacturers; and
   (3) Regulation of dental appliance retailers.

(c) Tabulation.

(i) Break a sentence into its parts and present them in tabular form only if this makes the meaning substantially clearer.

(ii) Use a single "or" to indicate the disjunctive and a single "and" to indicate the conjunctive at the end of the next to last item in a series. Use a semicolon at the end of each item in the series.
(iii) As an alternative to using "or" or "and" to indicate the disjunctive or conjunctive in a series, use a phrase in the introductory clause of the series that clearly expresses how many of the following items are to be included, such as, "any of the following," "one of the following," "all of the following," or "any one or more of the following."

(iv) Language that qualifies all of the items should not be included in the last item of the tabulation.

(v) Do not place a sentence or paragraph after a tabulation. If the sentence or paragraph is not part of the tabulated series, draft it as a separate subsection or paragraph.

(d) Provisos. Provisos should not be used. See discussion in Part II (12)(i) of the Bill Drafting Guide. If used, the proviso should be preceded by a colon. The words "Provided," or "Provided further," are followed by the word "That," thus: "Provided, That . . ."

(e) Colons. A colon is used to introduce a list or a proviso, as shown in (1)(b) and (d) of this subsection.

(f) Quotation marks. Quotation marks are used to set off a particular word or phrase under discussion, as in a definition of a term.

If the end of a quotation coincides with another punctuation mark, several rules should be observed. Periods and commas are always placed inside the quotation marks. All other punctuation marks, such as colons, semicolons, question marks, and exclamation points are placed inside the quotation marks only if they are part of the material being quoted.

(g) "Shall," "may," and "must."

(i) Since a statute speaks at the time it is read, it should be drafted in the present tense. Thus, the word "shall" should not be used to state a proposition in the future tense. "Evidence is admissible . . ." is preferable to "Evidence shall be admissible . . ." See Sutherland § 21.10; 4 John Marshall L.Q. 204.

(ii) "Shall" should only be used to mean "has a duty to." That is, to require the performance of an act. For example, "the governor shall appoint a director . . ." Avoid using a negative subject with an affirmative shall, "A person may not . . ." is preferable to "No person shall . . ." The latter means that no one is required to act. So read, it negates the obligation, but not the permission, to act. On the other hand, "A person may not . . ." negates also the permission and is, therefore, the stronger prohibition. To avoid confusion, the drafter should use the affirmative form, "A person may not . . .," rather than negative forms such as "No person may . . ." or "No person shall . . ." "Shall not" should only be used to mean "has a duty not to."

"May" indicates discretion and is used to confer a right, privilege, or power. Faunce v. Carter, 26 Wn.2d 211, 215 (1946); but cf. Buell v. City of Toppenish, 174 Wash. 79 (1933).

Do not confuse the words "may" and "might." "May" confers authority, as in "A person may file a petition." "Might" describes a possibility, as in "They might want coffee."

For a discussion of "may," "shall," and "must," see Garner.
(iii) To determine whether the use of "shall" or "may" is correct, a helpful test is to mentally substitute for the word "may" the words "has the authority to" and substitute for the word "shall" the words "has the duty to." This reading will make it readily apparent whether the usage is correct.

(iv) "Must" creates a condition precedent. Use "must" if the verb it qualifies is an inactive verb or an active verb in the passive voice. Examples: The applicant "must be" (inactive verb) an adult. Prior convictions "must be set forth" (active verb in passive voice) in the application.

Use "must not" if the verb it qualifies is an inactive verb or an active verb in the passive voice. Example: The applicant "must not be" (inactive verb) a convicted felon. The application "must not be filed" before the end of the reporting period.

Active voice is preferable to passive voice. If the word "must" seems appropriate because of passive voice, the drafter should improve the phrase to avoid ambiguity. See (h)(iii) of this subsection.

(h) Tense, mood, and voice.

(i) Use the present tense instead of the future tense. "A person who violates this section . . ." is preferable to "A person who shall violate this section . . ." Similarly, use the present perfect tense instead of the future perfect tense. "After apprehending a person who has violated this section . . ." is preferable to "After apprehending a person who shall have violated this section . . ."

(ii) Proper drafting uses both the indicative mood and the imperative mood, but the uses of the two moods are distinct. The proper role of the imperative mood is to create a legal duty or prescribe a rule of conduct, as in, "The department shall adopt rules." The imperative mood should not be used merely to state a legal result. "This chapter shall not apply to . . ." and "'Vehicle' shall mean . . ." are both "false imperatives" because the purpose of the provision is achieved by the very act of declaring the legal result. As self-executing provisions, the indicative mood is proper. Thus, "This chapter applies to . . ." and "'Vehicle' means . . ." In neither situation is the subjunctive mood appropriate, as in "If the director shall decide that . . ." See Dickerson § 6.6.

(iii) The active voice is preferable to the passive voice. The active voice forces the drafter to identify the party who is required or authorized to act. Thus, "The commission shall adopt rules . . ." is less ambiguous than "Rules shall be adopted . . ." or "Rules must be adopted . . ."

(i) Fewer, less. "Fewer" refers to number, individual countable items. "Less" refers to degree or quantity, general amounts. Examples: "Nonfat milk has fewer calories than whole milk." "We have less milk than I thought."

(j) Words and phrases to avoid. Ambiguity, wordiness, and legalese can be eliminated by using the suggested substitutes for the following words or phrases.

Do not use made-up words ending in "-ize" or "-ization," such as "prioritize" or "prioritization."

Avoid adjectives such as "real," "true," and "actual" and adverbs such as "duly" and "properly." Since these ideas are normally implied, expressing them in some instances creates doubt that they are implied elsewhere.

Avoid the use of "such." Substitute "the," "that," or another pronoun. Ordinarily, "such" requires the addition of "a" before a true singular noun; for example, "such a person."
(k) Italics. Italics are used in these instances:

(i) Case names. The case name is italicized, but the location information is not. For example: Citizens Council v. Bjork, 84 Wn.2d 891 (1975); and

(ii) Scientific names. For example, the state fossil is the Columbian mammoth of North America (Mammuthus columbi). The scientific name is always italicized, with the first word capitalized and the second and subsequent words, no matter what their derivation, not capitalized. If only the genus name is used (in this case, Mammuthus), it is still capitalized and italicized. The scientific name is placed in parentheses after the popular name, if used, but may also be referred to alone. Groups of higher ranks, such as phyla, classes, or orders, such as in "the phylum Brachiopoda," are not italicized.

(iii) Names of publications.

(2) NUMBERS

(a) Quantities and amounts should be written in words, not figures, as:

one and one-half

two and one-tenth percent

twenty-seven one-thousandths

four hundred sixty-seven feet population of twenty thousand one hundred sixteen dollars

nine hundred dollars and sixty-three cents

six percent

The Omnibus Appropriations Act, other appropriations, tax rates, and tables are exceptions to this rule.

Do not repeat numbers in parenthesized numerals.

Compound numbers from twenty-one to ninety-nine are hyphenated. Fractions are also hyphenated unless the numerator or denominator is a compound number that also requires a hyphen.

Examples:

two-thirds

two thirty-thirds twenty-three one-hundredths

(b) Dates.

January 1, 2016, through June 1, 2016, (commas on each side of year)

(3) CAPITALIZATION

If using the scientific name of a plant or animal, capitalize the genus but not the species. See RCW 77.08.030.

Adjectives composed of two or more words are usually hyphenated when they precede a noun, even though the phrase would not be hyphenated if standing alone, such as "low income," "one year," "full time," and "part time." Example:

Low-income persons may serve three-year terms.

This is necessary to avoid ambiguity. Compare the following sentences:

A patron may purchase two dollar tickets.
A patron may purchase two-dollar tickets.
The ill educated man sold a little used car.
The ill-educated man sold a little-used car.

He came across a man eating tiger.
He came across a man-eating tiger.

Do not hyphenate between an adverb ending in "ly" and the adjective it modifies. For example, "substantially new construction" does not need a hyphen.
