SPEAKER'S PRIVILEGE

The Speaker (Representative Morris presiding) welcomed Major General Timothy Lowenberg, thanked him for his service to the State of Washington and asked the members to acknowledge him.

The Speaker (Representative Morris presiding) welcomed Mike Gregoire and asked the members to acknowledge him.

The Speaker (Representative Morris presiding) recognized members of the Washington National Guard and asked the members to acknowledge them for their service to the State of Washington.

SPEAKER'S RULING

The Speaker (Representative Morris presiding): "The rules for House protocol have been handed out to your desks. In particular, I want to mention two or three items that will be monitored a bit closer this session than in past sessions.

When you are speaking on the floor, the protocol is to address the Speaker at the rostrum. Through the pomp and circumstance of the first week and half a lot of people were looking up at the galleries and so forth. This is against the House Rules as is applauding after speeches.

The most notable change – we will be monitoring the reading from the House Floor during speeches. The rule is you are not supposed to read. I am going to be looking for about 50% eye contact as the benchmark we are looking for up here when you are making your remarks on the floor before we call you out of order and try to bring you into the proper protocol."

HOUSE FLOOR PROTOCOL

A Summary of Significant Precepts

House Rule 4(B): The Speaker shall preserve order and decorum ... and may order the sergeant-at-arms to remove any person creating a disturbance within the House chamber ...

(1) Debate rules (to ensure that debate provides for a comparison of views and does not degenerate into a dispute):

- When wishing to speak, stand and wait until recognized by the Speaker. If another member is recognized first, sit and wait for the next opportunity. If recognized, respond "Thank you, Mister/Madam Speaker." (If two or more members stand, the Speaker determines the order.)
- Remarks are addressed to the Speaker.
- Request permission from the Speaker before reading any material (and, if objected to by any member, the question is determined by a vote of the House).
- Confine remarks to the debate at hand and avoid personalities.
- Attack arguments, not persons.
- Do not impute or impugn the motive of any member's vote or argument.
- Refrain from harsh expressions or expressions of disrespect.

- Allude to other members by description (e.g., the lady from the Xth District).
- Do not refer to the Senate.
- Refrain from applause.
- No conversations at your desk when a member is speaking. Please retire to the wings.
- Do not interrupt the member speaking, except to address the Speaker for the purpose of raising a point of order.
- Do not read newspapers or use the computer for unrelated purposes.
- No cell phones.
- Do not pass between the Speaker and the member speaking. When the Speaker is putting the question, do not walk across or out of the House.
- Enter and leave the chamber quietly.
- Be aware of the TVW cameras.

(2) A member may speak no more than twice and no longer than 10 minutes on a question, except with consent of the House or when allowed by rules to close debate after the previous question has been ordered. (During the last six days of session and the last four days before floor cutoff, the time limit is reduced to three minutes.)

(3) Except for materials normally distributed by the Chief Clerk, distribution of materials to members' desk on the floor requires the signature of the "sponsoring" member and the approval of the Speaker (through the Chief Clerk's office).

(4) Once begun, a roll call may not be interrupted. Do not approach the rostrum during a roll call.

(5) All members within the chamber when a vote is commenced are required to vote, unless excused for special reasons.

(6) While the House is in session:

Only members, pages, sergeants-at-arms, and clerks are permitted on the floor.

Lobbying is prohibited in the House chamber and wings.

Guests are not permitted in the House chamber or wings, with some exceptions. Only the Speaker may introduce and recognize guests in the galleries.

A dress code applies, and proper dress requirements are enforced."

There being no objection, the House advanced to the fourth order of business.
