We have a copy of something called the 'Reel' news, and also, oh there they are, and also an invitation. We're going to be having the first ever Fish-In here at the Washington State Capitol. It will be right outside the guard shack between the Cherberg building and us here. It's an opportunity, because it's on President's Day, to bring children, bring grandchildren. We'll have 400 fish, 40 of them will be tagged, and if you or one of your loved ones catches one, or someone here on campus, there will be a lovely prize to go with it. We're talking about the recreational fishing, the 1.1 million people who buy a fishing license every year, a wonderful aspect of the northwest living that is augmented by the fact that we have such a wonderful outdoor life. So I hope you'll take part, there is also a cutthroat, is that the name of a trout? There is also a cutthroat competition between caucuses. It's not like the other event that we'll hold the following week, this one is by weight. So I invite each member to go out during the lunch and we will weigh the basket of fish caught by the Senate Democratic Caucus and the basket of fish caught by the Senate Republican Caucus and they'll do the same in the House to come out with an overall weight winner. So I hope over there and over here you will accept the challenge and I understand there's some really big trout in there so I just wanted
