POINT OF INQUIRY

Senator Liias: "I wonder if Senator Padden would yield to a question?:"

President Habib: "He will. Please continue."

Senator Liias: "Thank you Mr. President. I know from the history books that in 1976, one of Washington's electors did not vote for the candidate who won the state's majority vote, and I wonder if Senator Padden remembers who that was and if he has any insights into that elector's motivations?"

Senator Padden: "Thank you Senator Liias. It might have been before you were born, I don't know. But, yes, and I get to tell the story every four years. I really think this can be solved, as a private matter among the parties. I think the problem, if indeed there was one, and 2016 was who the electors were that were selected. I mean, and just for the record, in my case there never was any pledge. There never was a requirement. I wasn't asked to do that and I went through a process. I think like the founding fathers envisioned for the electoral college on making a decision. I mean if you really pass this bill what you are saying is that we don't need the electoral college and that might well be the position of people, and just have the electoral votes automatically cast for whoever carries the state. But, this could be solved by a better vetting of who the electors are, that are going to be selected by whichever party. Unfortunately, recently it has been, always been your party that has carried the state and so you would have to do a better job, I think, of doing that."

Senator Hasegawa spoke against passage of the bill.

The President declared the question before the Senate to be the final passage of Senate Bill No. 5074.
