My husband Dan and I are retired teachers in WA and life members of WEA. When we had to select a health care plan, we discovered that PEBB plans would be more expensive for us than the plan offered by Regence of Oregon. We were eligible to sign up for Regence because we live in Clark County. We chose Regence and have had very good service from them.

When new benefits are given to retired teachers, too often they go only to retired employees who are on PEBB plans. This is not fair to us and to others who chose other plans for economic reasons. New benefits should be available to all teachers who retired from Washington public schools.
