SPEAKER'S REMARKS

Speaker Jinkins: “Thank you, Chair Peters, for welcoming us to the ancestral homeland of the Squaxin Island people. We are honored to have you joining us for opening day of the 2024 session. And celebrate the government-to-government relationship we have with Washington’s sovereign tribes.

Thank you, Rabbi Goldstein and Imam Kaddoura for being here today and lifting us all with your shared words of guidance and reflection. And thank you, Evan, for that glorious rendition of our national anthem.

I want to say a special welcome to the newest member of our body, Representative Nance. Thank you for your willingness to serve the people of your community. And for bringing the dedication and commitment you’ve poured into your other successful endeavors here to our collective work in The People’s House.

I also want to recognize the new Minority Leader, as well as the new Deputy Minority Leader. Drew and Mike, it was great to spend time with each of you in your districts. And I look forward to continuing to work with both of you in your new leadership roles.

Before I go into my remarks, I want to recognize the global context of this moment. The world is smaller every day. And things happening on the other side of the world can have just as big of an impact on us as the things that happen in our own communities. I know that I, and many others in this chamber, have felt this deeply over the last few months. We have seen how anti-Semitism anywhere leads to increased attacks against our Jewish community members and their places of worship. We have seen how the rise in Islamophobia, and the xenophobia closely tied to it, leads to attacks on our Islamic, Muslim, and Sikh community members and their places of worship. Here, we have worked together to strengthen our hate crime laws and increase security for non-profits, including religious organizations. And we will continue to fight anti-Semitism, Islamophobia, xenophobia, anti-Asian hate, anti-Blackness and the other social ills that put the safety and prosperity of Washingtonians at risk.

Members of the House, people of the great state of Washington – I stand before you today both optimistic and determined about the next 60 days. And, on this auspicious day, I mustn’t go one moment longer without proclaiming GO DAWGS!

When I was first chosen as Speaker-elect by my caucus, I set out across the state to visit every House member in every district before the 2020 session. My biggest takeaway from those visits was that we are all committed to making things better for the people we serve. That shared commitment helped our state fare better than most during a global pandemic, and we should be proud of that. Last year I again traveled the state to meet with as many of you as possible. And my optimism and determination are a result of the connections made in those visits. Whether it was a cup of coffee, a meal, a walk, or a tour of a noteworthy location in your districts, some common themes emerged in these visits that underscore how interconnected we are as Washingtonians. I don’t think there’s a district in this state where I haven’t visited a restaurant, a diner, or a coffee shop of some sort. Many of you chose to meet me in one of these locations over the last few months. And I saw time and again how deeply rooted you all are in your communities by the informal interactions with constituents while we were out. Like with Representative Klicker in Walla Walla. And with Representative Reed in Seattle’s Belltown neighborhood.

We keep hearing our state has the strongest economy in the nation. In fact, we were just recently ranked as the number one economy again by WalletHub. And maybe you’ve questioned those rankings at some point. But I can tell you unequivocally; after seeing establishments in every corner of the state bustling with customers, I feel very positive about the strength of our economy. I’m glad we made record investments in relief for sectors hit hard by the pandemic. Like our hospitality-related businesses. But we know our top ranking doesn’t tell the whole story. And doesn’t speak for everyone in our state.

In my visits with you, I heard over and over the ongoing challenges of housing, homelessness, and the divide between families who can afford to buy multi-million dollar homes, and those who cannot afford any home at all. Last year, we took some big bipartisan steps to address the housing shortage in our state. We passed a middle housing bill. We eased barriers to accessory dwelling units. We put the dream of homeownership within reach of folks who were historically excluded from it. And we made big investments in our Housing Trust Fund to build more affordable housing across our state.

But those aren’t the only steps we need to take. Those victories didn’t do anything for the constituent I met at one of my coffee hours this summer. She is a retired senior citizen, single, living on a fixed income. And her rent has gone up 70 percent over the last two years. 70 PERCENT! She doesn’t know if she can even afford to stay in her home. And isn’t sure where she’ll go if she can’t. Across Washington, people are facing skyrocketing rents. They are stressed. They are afraid. And they are asking us to help. We should help them with more predictability and stability. We can’t let them down.

Our economy may be strong, but there are too many families struggling to find childcare. And even if they do find it, they often can’t afford it. The childcare crisis is bad for both workers and employers in Washington, because even though our economy is creating good-paying jobs, without access to child care, too many qualified workers can’t fill or keep those jobs. That’s bad news for the workforce shortages we’re already grappling with.

Housing and childcare are integral to having a strong economy. I know this. You all know this. And that’s why we’re going to make sure every Washingtonian has stable, secure housing. And every working parent can access quality, affordable childcare. I hope you’re all with me on this.

When I came to your districts, several of you invited me into your homes and shared a meal with me. Which was a special treat. Some of you, like Representative Wylie, cooked one of the best dinners I’ve ever had. Some of you, like Representative Connors, made me a delicious breakfast. Some of you, like Representative McEntire, invited me to your family dinner. Where I was served a dish that’s now become a staple in my family too. And some of you, like Representative Kretz and his wife, served my wife and me the best darn slice of apple cake we’ve ever had. By the way, Joel – my wife still raves to this day about the coffee you served us a few years ago. So between that, the apple cake and the beautiful land you live on, you’re guaranteed we’ll be back again.

Sitting around your family tables, meeting your spouses, having good food and good conversation together, it was clear to me how interconnected we all are. But right now, across Washington, too many families are missing someone who isn’t there because they’re struggling with a behavioral health challenge. And they cannot access the treatment they need to get well. We’re all too aware of the toll of the opioid crisis. And how fentanyl is killing Washingtonians. Including an alarming increase in fentanyl poisonings and deaths in children. That’s why we are going to expand access to behavioral health by investing in our workforce, and expanding community-based care and inpatient treatment in our communities.

I’m excited our UW behavioral health teaching hospital is coming online in June, which will increase available bed capacity, and be a boon to training our behavioral health workforce. Thank you, Frank, for making this happen five years ago. It’s incredibly gratifying to see it come to fruition.

We’re going to address the opioid crisis and prevent toxic drug poisonings by ramping up opioid education and awareness for young people. Ensuring overdose reversal medications are widely available. And increasing safety and supports for families impacted by the fentanyl crisis. Expanding treatment, both inpatient services and low barrier access to outpatient services. And enhancing access to recovery supports. So people can stay healthy and rebuild their lives. Tribal communities have been the most severely impacted by fentanyl and its devastation. No community wants to be at the forefront of this crisis, but Tribes are also leading the way with model programs that remove barriers to treatment. And we would be wise to listen to their voices and learn from their approach. Thank you, Representative Lekanoff, for bringing us together.

I had a lot of great food in your districts, but I also had some good exercise. These excursions reinforced for me how beautiful and special our state is. I walked along Puget Sound from the Port of Seattle to the Olympic Sculpture Park with Representative Berry. Representative Callan took me to see Jakob Two Trees, the amazing, 14-foot troll statue along the Rainier Trail near Issaquah. Representatives Griffey and Couture took me on a tour of a sawmill that is one of the district's major employers. Underscoring the importance of healthy forests for both our environment and our economy. And while it was too far to walk, I saw some of the most gorgeous, remote areas of our state while driving the back roads from Pomeroy to Colfax when going from visiting Representative Dye to visiting Representative Schmick.

I came to Washington 36 years ago to attend law school as a young Midwesterner who grew up in a farming community. Seeing the different regions of our state, each with its own distinctive beauty, and finishing the 505 miles of Washington's portion of the Pacific Crest Trail this past year, has made me fall in love where we live all over again. I'm so proud of the progress we've made to protect our state from the impacts of climate change. And I'm determined we are not going back on that progress. We're not going back on rebates for electric heat pumps and weatherization grants. We're not going back on converting school buses from noisy, dirty diesel to electric. We're not going back on addressing rising asthma rates in our children. Washingtonians know climate change is real. They know it is a threat. They want us to take this threat seriously and act to protect their families, their homes, their communities, their health, their quality of life, and the strong economy we have. The very air we breathe is at stake if we don't protect our investments in a cleaner, better future for our state. So, we're going to protect those and keep moving forward on climate.

Speaking of not going backwards, I want to be clear that as long as I'm Speaker of this House, we will protect every person's bodily autonomy. When the decisions you make for yourself do not impact the health or safety of others, no one but you should be making them. When the US Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade, I said this state would remain a beacon of light and hope for all impacted by this terrible decision. That is exactly what we are for patients coming here from states with draconian anti-choice laws. Desperately seeking reproductive health care. These are laws that deny care to women. Even at the cost of their lives! Not in Washington state. Not only will we be here to help you get the reproductive or gender-affirming care you need, we've also made sure other states can't punish you for coming here to seek that legal and necessary care.

This may seem like a lot to tackle for a short session. But everything is interconnected. Housing and behavioral health. Childcare and workforce. Climate and the economy.

Our challenges don't exist in siloes. And we cannot solve them in siloes. We only have 60 days, but I'm optimistic and determined. We talked about our mutual challenges when I visited your districts. And I invite you all to work together with me on solutions.

Let's protect renters from skyrocketing rents. Let's help working families access childcare. Let's help people access behavioral health care. Let's prevent fentanyl deaths in our communities. Let's protect our hard-won investments in clean air and clean energy innovation. And continue to act on climate. And tell me what won't work in your districts. I've been to your communities. I know that while we're all interconnected, different regions face unique challenges and sometimes a one-size-fits-all solution won't work. Let's talk about that. We're not always going to agree, and that's OK. We just need to keep moving forward because Washingtonians expect progress. So let's make it happen. Go Dawgs!"

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Representative Stokesbary: "Madame Speaker, it's a privilege to be standing here today, representing Washington's 31st Legislative District for the 2024 session. And it's an honor that my colleagues on this side of the aisle have elected me as their caucus leader.

I'm so proud to represent Washington House Republicans—a group of 40 men and women who are deeply committed to improving the lives of their constituents.

We wouldn't be here for the next 60 days, away from our family, friends and community if we didn't believe in Washington's tremendous potential.

And make no mistake, Washington has tremendous potential. We have incredible natural resources, we have financial capital, we have human capital. All of the ingredients to make Washington the best place to live, work and raise a family.

But in too many ways, our beloved Washington state is going in the wrong direction.

There is a catalogue of crises facing our great state. We have the fourth highest homeless rate in the country. We had the highest cost of gas in the country at one point last year. And Seattle has the ninth highest cost of living in the country. We have the 4th highest combined sales tax rate in the country. We set a new record for violent crime in 2023 and are second in the country for property crime. We are the 3rd most expensive state to buy a home. We had the largest increase in drug overdose deaths of any state over the past year. We are 35th in the nation for business climate, down from number fifteen in 2022. 70% of K-12 students are failing math standards and 50% are failing reading standards.

Madame Speaker, it's time for a change. It's time to fix Washington. It's not just me saying that. It's not just House Republicans. The issues I just listed are exactly what respondents to last week's Crosscut/Elway survey identified were the most important issues the Legislature should focus on during this session: Homelessness; Cost of living; Taxes; Crime; Housing; Drugs; the Economy; Education.

We must fix these crises, and fix Washington.

Now, I recognize that it is easy for a minority caucus to do nothing more than criticize the majority. Tautologically, the votes of minority legislators are not necessary to form a governing majority.

But Madame Speaker, House Republicans here in Washington want to help resolve the numerous crises confronting our state. Most of our constituents don't care if something is a Democratic idea or a Republican idea. They just want good ideas. And I am here to share just some of the meaningful, constructive policy solutions that members of my caucus stand ready to offer this session.

We must fix the public safety crisis. Over the past five years, criminal activity has exploded in Washington: Homicide is up 96% since 2019; We rank number three for automobile theft, number two for property crime, and number one for retail theft; 61% of violent crimes go unsolved. Perhaps no surprise when our state ranks dead last in police officers per capita. We should provide recruitment and retention bonuses for police officers to improve both manpower and morale. We should toughen penalties for concealment and organized retail theft—topics Rep. Griffey has been working on for years—so that law enforcement has the tools to go after property crime. And most importantly, we should bring to the floor HB 1363, which has dozens of co-sponsors in both of our caucuses, reinstating vehicular pursuit laws so that officers can track down the perpetrators of these crimes.

Fix the drug crisis. Tragically, Washington is at the epicenter of the fentanyl crisis. As I mentioned, Washington experienced the largest increase in drug overdose deaths of any state this past year. The amount of fentanyl seized by the DEA in our state has increased 1670% since 2019. Opioid deaths have more than doubled since 2019.

While many House Republicans voted for a landmark drug possession law during a special session last May, that legislation is aimed at individual drug users, many of whom are suffering from substance use disorder. But just because we increasingly recognize that drug addiction is as much a health issue as a criminal one, surely we can recognize that the manufacturers and distributors of these deadly drugs do not deserve an open hand. Representative Mosbrucker has introduced legislation to enhance penalties for fentanyl distribution, to reduce the flow of illegal drugs through our state. Representative Maycumber is working on legislation to establish a new Bureau of Narcotics within the State Patrol to fight sophisticated drug trafficking rings that operate across local government jurisdictional boundaries. And Representative Graham has a bill that would make it a crime to expose children and vulnerable adults to fentanyl and other controlled substances.

Fix the affordability crisis. High taxes and burdensome regulations have driven up the cost of living for middle-class families in Washington. Housing and transportation cost 30% more in Washington compared to the national average. Our state has the fourth highest combined sales tax rate in the country, which disproportionately hurts low-income families.

And thanks to the Climate Commitment Act (CCA), Washington drivers currently pay the third highest gas prices in the nation. Representative Connors has introduced a bill to provide a one-time rebate to drivers, funded by surplus CCA revenue, to help offset the high price of gas caused by the CCA. Washington remains one of the only states in the country to have not enacted broad-based tax relief since the pandemic began. This will be the first, and hopefully last time I suggest we follow the lead of states like New York and California, but they managed to cut taxes. So we should be able to as well. Representative Orcutt is proposing a 0.5% reduction in the state sales tax, which will primarily benefit lower-income families and will help make our state's tax system more fair.

Fix the housing and homelessness crisis. Thanks to years of irrational land use policy and costly building regulations, Washington has the fewest number of housing units per household of any state. As a result, we rank as the third most expensive state to buy a home, 88% of families can no longer afford a median priced home, half of all renters are cost burdened paying more than 30% of their income toward rent. As housing costs go up, even the most affordable housing becomes unattainable for many individuals. Further fueling the homelessness crisis. Washington now has the fourth largest homeless population in the country and it's continuing to climb. Growing at an unprecedented rate of 11% in 2023. While we work our way out of this housing and homelessness crisis, we must require that cities and counties remove encampments near schools, parks, playground, and childcare centers. And give them the tools to do so. Then we must increase the supply of all types of housing. To that end, Representative Cheney has introduced legislation to incentivize landlords to voluntarily lower or freeze rental costs. Thereby creating stable and affordable housing through a new tax credit program. Representative Connors has a bill to provide downpayment assistance to nurses, doctors, firefighters, police, childcare workers and other critical professions that need to be able to afford housing in our state. Representative Jacobsen introduced a bill, drawn from her experience on the Puyallup City Council, to authorize cities and counties to create a simple housing permit process for affordable housing units in certain areas.

Fix the education crisis. Despite over 50% of the state near general fund budget going to K-12, academic performance is plummeting. According to OSPI's own report card, currently 70% of students are failing math standards and 50% are failing reading standards. Tragically, the scores are even worse for minority and low-income children who fell further behind their peers during the prolonged school closures. Over the past few years, public schools have lost over 60,000 students. Suggesting that families are not satisfied with the education they are receiving. Representative Rude is working on legislation to put tutors in every school and more paraeducators in classrooms because we know that high-dosage tutoring is the most effective intervention to get students back on track. Representative Corry has introduced a bill to fund literacy coaches in elementary schools, prioritizing low-income students and those who have fallen furthest behind their peers, since we know that 3rd grade reading ability is often a leading indicator of academic success or failure. Last session this body passed a bill sponsored by Representative McEntire that would have created a new grant program to help school districts in economically disadvantaged areas build new schools because all children deserve access to a world-class education, regardless of income. We should pass that bill again this session.

And we should not be so vain as to insist that public schools are the only environment worthy of our support. Nor should we be so vacuous as to believe that supporting one student's needs means depriving other students who have different needs. Representative Eslick has introduced a bill that would fund education savings accounts for students who are low-income, eligible for special education, or in persistently failing schools, so that all children can exercise the privilege of attending private school or homeschool. Not just those who can afford it.

Fix the childcare crisis. After a decade of excessive regulations, Washington's childcare system is broken. There are massive childcare deserts across our state and 63% of children under five don't have access to nearby childcare. And most families that are able to find childcare can't afford it. Our state has the ninth most expensive infant care in the nation. The average family spends over 35% of their income to send two children to childcare. Many of our members are proud to cosponsor HB 1716, which would provide a B&O tax credit to employers that voluntarily provide childcare assistance to employees to help ensure parents can remain in the workforce. Representative Chambers is developing a proposal to extend paid family leave benefits to new moms for six months. Which is good for babies and mothers and will also reduce pressure on a grossly overextended infant childcare market. Representatives Couture and Jacobsen have bills that would relax licensing, regulatory and zoning requirements for providers in childcare deserts to ensure children have access to care and parents can get to work. No matter where they live.

Now, I recognize that this is a short, supplemental session. Even if we could all agree on not just the symptoms, but the treatment, it would be difficult to comprehensively address these problems in the next 60 days. But that doesn't mean we shouldn't try. To paraphrase President Kennedy, 'we should seek solutions to these issues. Not because they are easy. But because they are hard.' Over the next 60 days, we must have the honesty to admit when we were wrong and the humility to consider new approaches. And meanwhile, we must avoid the hubris to think that good intentions are a sufficient condition for good policies.

So I'll end where I began. Washington state is full of potential. And none of us would be here if we didn't think we could help. But there is a catalogue of crises confronting our great state. It's time for a change, Madame Speaker. Let's fix Washington."

There being no objection, the House advanced to the fourth order of business.
